Prudence as Knowledge of Reality

Continuation of Immaculate Conception Academy Commencement Address

by Dr. John Tardiff on June 5, 2021

Divine providence has placed ICA here for a purpose – to educate you, dear graduates. And what does that mean, to educate you? If I was to fully unpack that, this would be a very long talk indeed. So I will put it in a nutshell – ICA aims to produce prudent men. If you are prudent, you will have responded well to our teaching. ICA also aims to produce contemplative men. If you delight in, and rest in, the truth, you will have responded well to our teaching.

These might seem rather jarring statements. Prudent? We must understand what that means. It does NOT mean careful. It does not mean slow to act. In current parlance “prudent” even has connotations of shiftiness and pragmatism. But that is just because the world is deeply evil. Prudence, in fact, is the queen of the moral virtues, it is that which makes the other virtues, such as justice, temperance, and courage, virtues at all. Prudence, briefly stated, is right reason in human action. It is acting in accordance with reality.

But what does this look like, in practice? As Josef Pieper puts it, “The Christian is prudent; namely, he does not allow his view on reality to be controlled by the Yes or No of his will, but rather he makes this Yes or No of the will dependent upon the truth of real things.” Thus, the prudent man conforms his will with the truth: he does not act against the truth of reality, he does not act in such a way as to attempt to change the truth to fit his own liking.

Still, this needs clarification. And St. Thomas clarifies. At one point he rather dryly explains that three things are required for prudence: knowledge of principles, knowledge of particulars, and the cleverness to choose the means to the end. This simple enumeration actually reveals truths of tremendous depth. What does “knowledge of principles” mean? On a basic level, knowledge of right and wrong. But also, knowledge of what is noble, knowledge of what the true value of a thing is, knowledge of the goodness of things. All of these types of knowledge come to bear in the virtue of prudence. Knowledge of particulars is exactly what it sounds like: knowledge of the circumstances surrounding concrete actions.

Prudence, then very much requires a clear perception of reality.
